8. A sample Glog will open. Follow the directions on the screen to get rid of ALL the elements you see. You need to start with a blank "wall" that looks like graph paper.

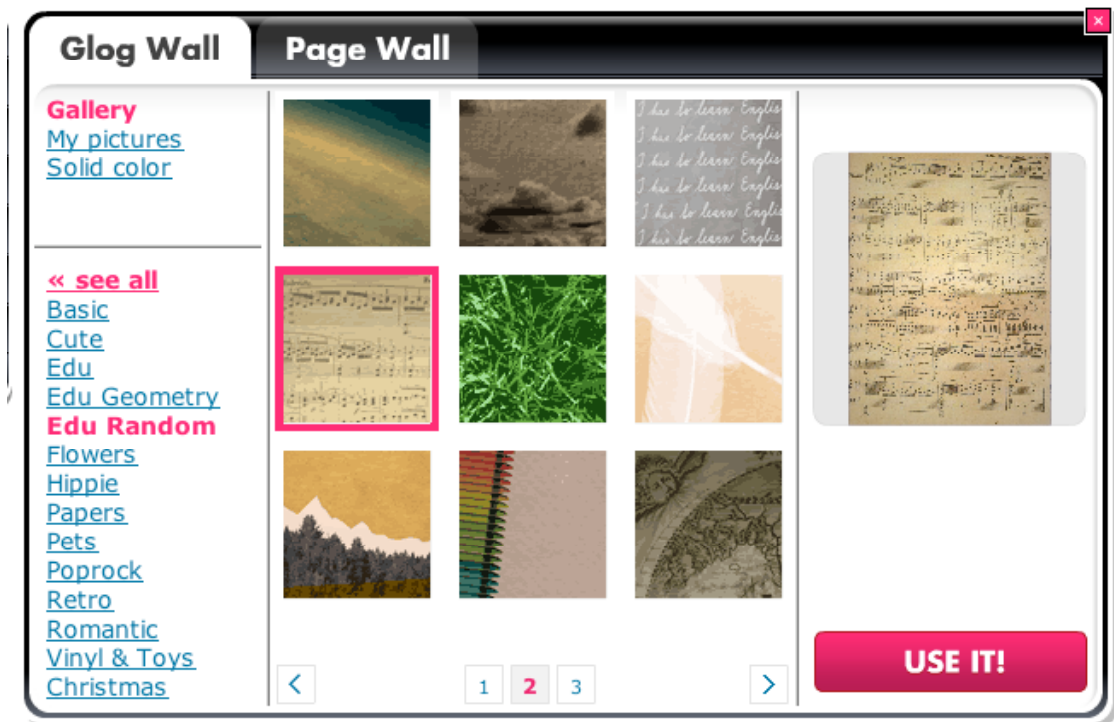

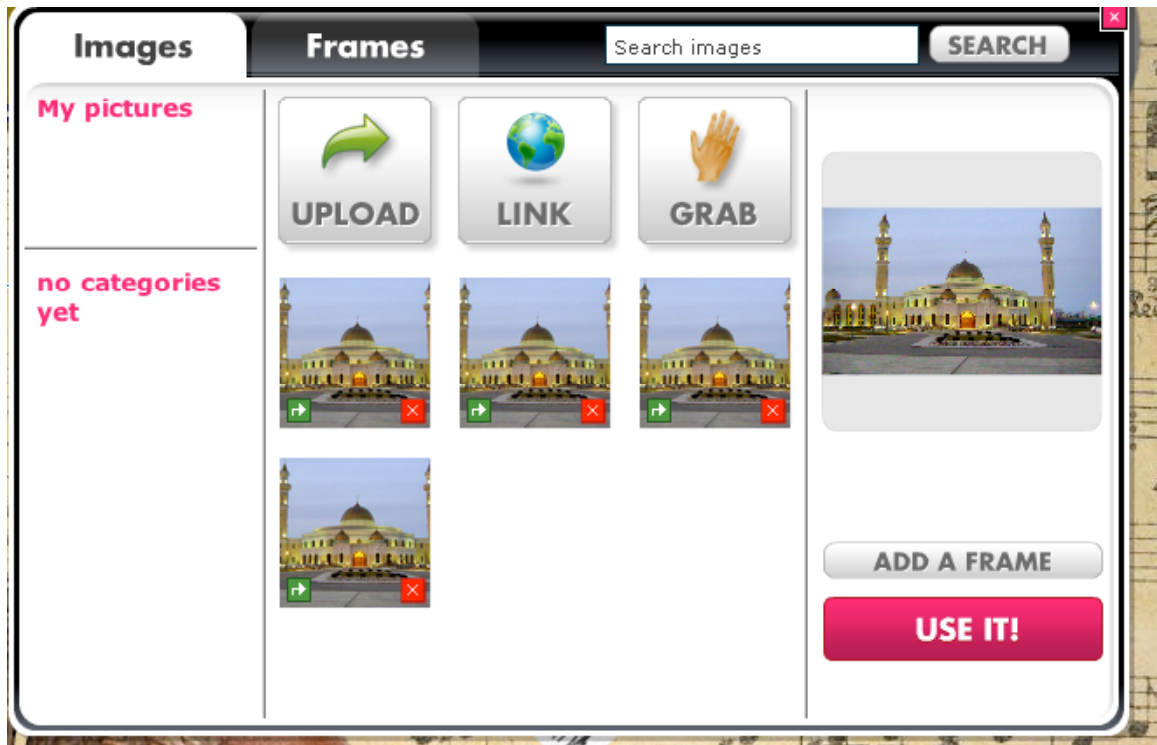

9.

10. Select "Wall" to choose your background for your poster. There are several galleries to browse through.

11. You can try anything out on Glogster before you apply it. Don't be afraid to experiment.

12. Once your background is set, you're ready to start using the different elements. You can add any of the elements seen on step 9.

13. To add images, go to Google Images and search for what you want to add. Copy the image to your desktop. Find all your images at one time. In Glogster select "Images" from menu on step 9. Select "Upload". Click on your desktop and select your images to upl;oad. This will take a few minutes. Be patient; every time you hit upload the process has to start over again for another set of images. Once your images are uploaded, they will show up in your gallery.

Select the image you want to use; it will appear on the right side of the window above. If you want, click "Use It". The image will appear on your Glog. Drag it to where you want it.

14. Save your work frequently.

15. To add text, click the text tool from menu in step 9. You will get a Post-It note to type in. Select the style that goes with your Glog and click "Use It". Drag it to where you want it to be on your Glog, and start typing in it by clicking "Edit". You may type as much as you want; once the box fills up, you get an elevator bar that will let you scroll down to read everything you've written. You can also change the font and color of the text in Edit as well.

16. Add no sounds or video clips without first showing them and discussing them with Mrs. L.
